Purpose

Use this classroom audit to review whether learners experience learning as safe, purposeful, engaging and supportive. The aim is not entertainment alone. Joy of learning means confidence, curiosity, belonging and meaningful challenge.

EDUFI-aligned use

The audit supports school culture, learner wellbeing and classroom routines that help learners engage with learning as active participants.

FINEEC-benchmarked use

The audit supports self-evaluation by identifying strengths and development targets in classroom culture and learner experience.

Key definitions

Wellbeing means learners experience safety, belonging, care and access to support. Joy of learning means positive engagement with challenge, curiosity, progress and meaningful participation. Purposeful challenge means learners are stretched with support, not punished by difficulty.

How to use

Complete the audit for one class, department or school team. Choose two areas of strength and one improvement priority. Agree one visible routine to trial for two weeks.

Working tool

Audit area	Strong evidence	Some evidence	Needs development	Next step
Learners feel safe to ask questions
Mistakes are treated as part of learning
Challenge is purposeful and supported
Learners experience belonging and recognition
Movement, talk or collaboration supports learning
Feedback increases confidence and improvement
Quiet or less confident learners have participation routes
Teacher notices signs of stress, withdrawal or exclusion

Model completed example

A department audit shows strong classroom relationships but weak learner reflection routines. The team agrees to use one weekly prompt: What helped you learn today? What do you need next? After two weeks, teachers compare responses and adjust support groups.

Reflection and improvement prompts

- Where do learners show confidence and belonging?
- Where does challenge feel purposeful?
- Which routine could improve joy of learning without reducing academic seriousness?
